Master stroke The collection of quotes

Over the last one year, while traveling to office via Public Transport System, I have come across so many things in terms of ground realities that a common man faces in his day to day life.

These minuscule level of problems might be a big uphill task for a common man.

Waiting at the bus stop, someone asking, when his destination's bus comes, because of his illiteracy, did send a chill down my spine for the first time.

People bargaining with call centre taxi driver for as small as Rs 2.00 for 10- 15 minutes.

Whereas on the uphill side an incident which really mesmerized me, was about a blind person knowing when to get down of the bus, without any help and through-out the journey, the person had a smile on his face, which reflected as a sense of contentment with life.

It all did affect me personally in a way that, I somewhere lost my arrogance, ego and hatred among all these happening.

The thought of writing this quote book, came when a few friends said to me that the quotes that I write in my "Good morning India mail" need to be compiled in a book, hence I just have compiled a few of those quotes.

Go the extra mile, it will never be crowded, go on a little more and you will be alone there along with the sun and world far behind you.-

See from the eyes of the enemy, you will find your weakness and start working towards making your weakness into your strengths.

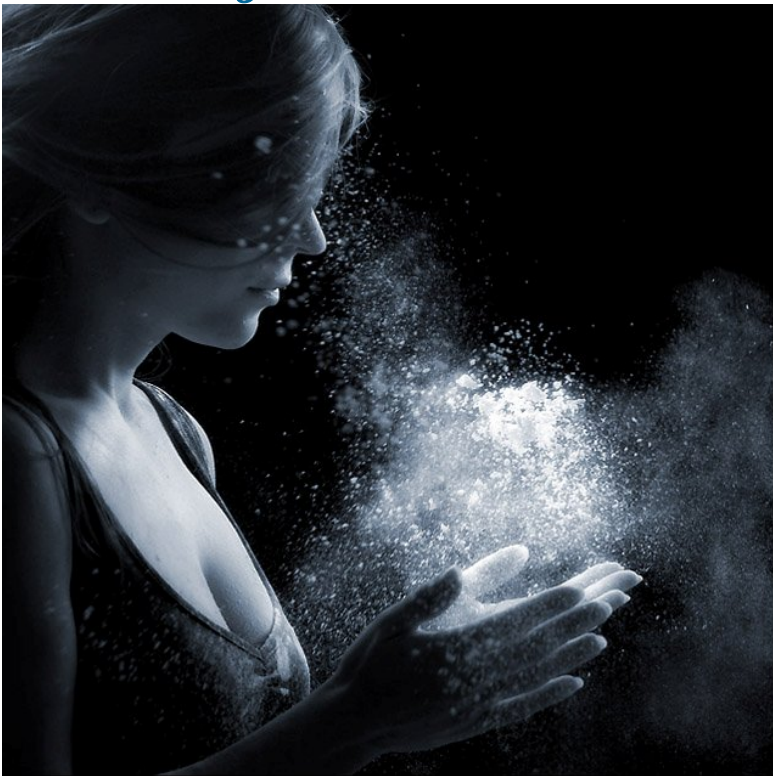

Winning is a contagious habit

If everything seems to be going right, you obviously don't know what the hell is going on-

It should be the inner world in you (Ur soul, mind,) that should control you, not the outside world and people in it, and then only you accomplish your dreams unlimited

Every one loses many worlds, before one world is created

For every 10 'No', you surely at least 1 'Yes', HENCE every time you get a 'No', just remember that you are moving closer to a much needed Yes .

A world of imperfect understanding does lend itself to perfect generalization

Any Girl is always known by her innocence and Boy by his manners

Emotions might not hold any ground for hardliners, but one emotion just fades to die off for any one in this world, that emotion is Hope, the world lives on this single emotion.

The two most important things to succeed in life, that are learnt from my mom were simplicity and common sense

The problem with people is not with the fear of uncertainty of future, but the deep fear of failure to cope up with that uncertainty

1000 dreams can come true, but after the death of millions of dreams, that is what life has taught me

*When you're successful your well wishers know who you are;
when you are unsuccessful you know who your well wishers are –*

The most common rules of simplicity, end up in life as the most un-used principles in life
